THEODOSIUS II

Emperor in East

408

In East ARCADIVS died in 408 at age of 31 leaving his 7-yr-old son THEODOSIUS II to succeed him.

Theodosius II reigned for over 40 years though real power was in the hands of his SISTER PULCHERIA AND his WIFE AELIA EUDOXIA

(384-423) Flavius HONORIUS

Emperor of the West (395-423). Second son of THEODOSIUS. On the death of Theodosius the empire was divided between Honorius, who took the West with Rome as his capital, and ARCADIUS, who took the East with Constantinople as his seat. Honorius being only 11 yrs old, was put under guardianship of STILICHO who was all his life the real ruler of the West. In 401 ALARIC,

King of the VIS (10TH, invaded Story and after two battles with Sticks was obliged to withdraw, Attacked (405) again with like arms. Sticks losing town was murdered at Verona (408) and Alou again invaded Story. Rome escaped was ravaged by Alou's army (410) but fled by his death (410). Plinius now on second visit. Confronted. Spain, Gaul, and other fine provinces were lost to Rome during this reign.

Athaulf commanded such units in "upper Pannonia" by which is probably meant Pannonia I and Serbia.
But Ammentius was active among the "double people" before the Slavs broke away.

In Pannonia the bishop converted two dukes who are identified as ALATITEUS and SAFEX. But a

The Eastern imperial consul was also recognized in the West. Though the policy of reconciliation between East and West made only slow progress, Alaric & his Goths had now become unnecessary. That led to the breaking of the FOEDUS, whereupon AETIUS and the other hostages who had since 405 guaranteed the treaty between the empire and the Goths probably returned home.

Spring 408

The Goths once again marched against the West. They turned 1st toward E-MONA-LAIBACH, which, as a city in the Julian Alps already belonged to Italy. The Goths occupied both the main part of modern day Slovenia, Carinthia and southern STYRIA and the adjoining upper Pannonian area of western Hungary. At the same time Alaric demanded an indemnity of 4000 pounds of gold, threatening to invade study if he did not receive it.

In considering this enormous sum of 288,000 50/101, a proportion of I, four thousand people could have lived from that comfortably for a year (this is estimated at 100,000) II: 4000 pounds of gold amounts to the yearly income of a number of the wealthy, though not the wealthiest class.

The Roman Senate wanted Rome's demands clearly stated, not only managed to put through Rome's demands with great difficulty and against the vehement opposition of that body.

Oct. 408

After Stilicho was toppled Alaric thought his time had come. He negotiated with Honorius residing in Milan again. His offer was rejected. He suddenly (without the arrival of his brother-in-law RUTHAULF) Alaric moved back into Italy. They bypassed Ravenna and marched along the Flaminian coastal road via Anagnina as far as land of the PICENI. Moved along the VIA SALARIA to the Gates of Rome.

The Eternal City was completely cut off from all supplies. Famine and epidemics afflicted the city.

Attempts were made to negotiate with Alaric. The Gothic king made the Romans pay very dearly. 5000 pounds of gold; 30,000 pounds of silver; 4000 silk robes; and 3000 purple dyed furs; 3000 pounds of pepper. The tribute was raised from Public and Private sources. Additionally,
